CHANGES

The Second Launch

Your home came off the market without selling. Right now every agent in town has your address, and most of them are offering the same thing: the MLS, professional photos, and a sign. That is a listing. What follows is a plan.

We do not relist a home that did not sell. We relaunch it. Here is exactly what that means, so you can hold us to it, and so you can compare it line by line with anyone else who calls.

1 A fresh valuation from closed sales

The first listing was almost certainly priced against what neighbors were asking. Luxury buyers do not shop that way. They compare your home to what actually closed in the last 90 days, and they see the gap instantly.

- We rebuild the number from closed luxury sales only, adjusted for condition, lot, view, and finish level.
- We show you the three homes a buyer will compare yours to, and where yours wins or loses.
- We price to attract the strongest buyer in the first two weeks, not to leave room to come down.

2 A presentation plan before a single photo

Buyers over $2M decide from their phone. The first six images either earn a tour or lose one.

- Walkthrough with a staging plan: what to stage, what to update, what to leave alone.
- Targeted updates only where the return is clear. We will tell you what not to spend on.
- Pre-inspection so nothing surprises us in escrow.
- Photography package: twilight, aerial drone, cinematic video tour, floor plans, and virtual staging for any empty room.

3 A launch date, not a go-live

The listing does not appear one quiet Tuesday. It launches.

- We choose the date around the market and your move-out timeline.
- Two weeks of pre-marketing: our buyer network and the top luxury and relocation agents in the Bay Area see your home before the public does.
- Broker tour and private preview in the first week, not a public open house.

4 A written marketing plan aimed where the buyers are

Some of your buyers are local and will find the listing on their own. Many are not: Allied's 2025 migration data shows the people moving into the Bay Area come from Chicago, Seattle, Boston,

New York, and Washington, D.C., with Raleigh-Durham, Ann Arbor, Dallas, Denver, and Houston close behind, and luxury buyers also search from abroad. Those buyers have to be found.

CHANNEL	WHAT WE DO
Paid digital	Targeted ads in those exact metros, by income and location, plus retargeting to everyone who views the listing
Luxury syndication	Global luxury portals and the eXp Luxury network, so the listing appears where wealth searches
Agent outreach	Direct outreach to the relocation and luxury agents who bring those buyers here
Video	A cinematic tour and short-form cuts for social, run as ads, not just posted
Print	Just-listed pieces to the surrounding neighborhood, where the next referral lives

5 Decision points and a weekly written update

When a listing has no plan beyond the launch, the only lever left is price. Ours has decision points, agreed before launch, so a price move is a decision, never the default.

WHEN	WHAT WE REVIEW	WHAT CAN CHANGE
Week 1	Views, saves, showing requests, broker feedback	Photo order, copy, ad targeting
Week 3	Showings vs. offers, feedback themes	Presentation fixes, price position
Week 6	Buyer pool exhausted or not	Price move, incentive, relaunch timing
Week 10	Full reset review	New photography, new number, or pause until spring

Every week you get a written update: showings, feedback, online traffic, and the next move. You will never wonder what is happening with your home.

The launch calendar

TIMING	WHAT HAPPENS
Week -4	Valuation, walkthrough, presentation plan agreed
Week -3 to -2	Updates and staging; pre-inspection
Week -1	Photography, video, drone, floor plans; marketing assets built
Week -1	Pre-marketing to buyer network and agents begins
Launch	Live on MLS and luxury portals; ads on; broker tour scheduled
Weeks 1, 3, 6, 10	Decision points above

A listing puts your home in front of whoever happens to be looking. A plan puts it in front of everyone who should be.

There are a lot of agents. Not all of them bring a plan. We hold ourselves to the highest standard of service for our clients, and that starts with the marketing plan. Between us we have closed over 1,000 transactions and $500 million in sales, and homes that did not sell the first time are our specialty.
