FOR HOMEOWNERS THINKING AHEAD

The Fall Prep Guide

If there is even a small chance you sell next year, these are the three things worth doing this fall, plus how to sell and buy at the same time without losing sleep.

The Fall Prep Guide

You might sell next year. You might not. Either way, the homeowners who come out ahead in the spring are the ones who did three small things in the fall. None of them commit you to anything.

1 Get a real number

The online estimate is a starting guess built from tax records. It does not know about your kitchen, your lot, your view, or what the home three doors down actually closed at last month.

- A real number comes from closed sales in your neighborhood in the last 90 days, adjusted for condition and finish.
- Knowing it changes every other decision: what to update, when to list, and what you can afford on the other side. It takes about a minute to request and costs nothing.

2 Learn what buyers here pay extra for

Every neighborhood has a short list of things buyers pay a premium for, and a longer list of things they do not care about. Spending on the second list is the most common mistake we see.

Usually worth it in the East Bay luxury market

- Kitchen and primary bath that feel finished, not necessarily new
- Outdoor living: covered patio, clean landscaping, a yard that photographs
- Fresh neutral paint, updated lighting, refinished floors
- A pre-inspection with the small items already fixed

Usually not worth it

- Full remodels started six months before listing
- Pools, additions, or anything you would not finish before spring
- Personal-taste upgrades a buyer will redo anyway

We will walk your home and give you the short list for your street. Do not spend a dollar before you know.

3 Pick your window

Spring sells fastest and for the most. But a spring launch is built in the fall: updates in November and December, photography in January, pre-marketing before the public sees it, launch in late February or March.

Selling and buying at the same time

Most of the homeowners we work with are not just selling. They are moving. That means two transactions, and the order matters.

APPROACH	HOW IT WORKS	BEST WHEN
Sell first, then buy	Close your sale, then shop with cash in hand and a known number	You can be flexible on timing or have somewhere to land
Buy first, then sell	Secure the next home, then list yours with a clear deadline	Your equity and income support carrying both briefly
Sale contingency	Your offer on the next home depends on your sale closing	You need the equity to buy and want one clean move
Rent-back after closing	Sell, then stay in your home for a set period while you close on the next one	You want the sale price locked without a double move

We handle both sides, so you are never negotiating one without the other, and the timelines are built to fit together.

At a glance

THIS FALL

1. Get a real number from closed sales
 2. Learn what buyers here pay extra for
 3. Pick your window
- Selling and buying? We handle both sides

WHY

Every other decision depends on it

So you don't spend a dollar on the wrong list

A spring launch is built in October, November, and December

One plan, two transactions, timelines that fit

Even a small chance you sell next year? Do these three things this fall. The rest can wait.

NEXT STEP

Start with a real number, not a guess.
